1.2 INTRODUCTION

We all are citizens of India and our constitution has given us many rights and freedoms which we enjoy every day. Our constitution is world's lengthiest written constitution which had 395 articles in 22 parts and 8 schedules at the time of commencement. Now Constitution of India have 448 articles in 25parts, 12 schedules, 5 appendices and 98 amendments. But there is no such special rights or freedoms have been given to the journalists in our constitution. Journalists have been enjoying the same rights and freedom what a common enjoys. All these, we shall discuss in this unit.

1.3 INDIAN CONSTITUTION

The Indian Republic is governed in terms of the Constitution of India which was adopted by the Constituent Assembly on 26th November 1949 and came into force on 26th January 1950. The Constitution provides for a parliamentary form of government which is federal in structure with certain unitary features. The constitutional head of the executive of the Union is the President.

It is not enough for an aspiring journalists to learn the media law alone. They should also be knowledgeable in certain features of the constitution. For this purpose, this Chapter provides a brief account of the following part of the Indian Constitution of India: Fundamental Rights, directive principle of state policy and parliamentary privileges.

1.4 FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

The fundamental rights are the natural rights provided by the Constitution of India. The fundamental rights can be altered only by making an amendment in the Constitution. All the citizens of the country possess the right to directly move the Supreme Court, if their fundamental rights are violated, which is by itself a fundamental right.

Part III of the Constitution of India deals with the fundamental rights (Article 12-35) which include right to equality, right to freedom, right against exploitation, right to freedom of religion, cultural and educational rights and right to constitutional remedies.

1.4.1 RIGHT TO EQUALITY

Articles 14-18 deal with right to equality. These Articles provide equality before law, prohibition of discrimination on ground of religion, race, caste, sex or place of birth, equality of opportunity in matters of public employment. The state can make any provision for backward class of citizens, abolish of untouchability and abolish of titles other than a military or an academic distinctions.

1.4.2 RIGHT TO FREEDOM

Article 19-21 deal with the right to freedom. India is one of those countries which guarantee their citizens the right to freely express themselves. The Constitution guarantees six fundamental freedoms, and the 'freedom of speech and expression' is the first among them.

All citizens shall have the right to

- (a) freedom of speech and expression;
- (b) assemble peacefully and without arms;
- (c) form associations and unions;
- (d) move freely throughout the territory of India;
- (e) reside and settle in any part of the territory of India;
- (f) practice any profession, or carry on any occupation, trade or business.

But these rights are not absolute, the exceptions to the above rights include the threat to sovereignty and integrity of India, the security of the State, friendly relation with foreign states, public order decency or morality, contempt of court, defamation and incitement to an offence or any other reasonable restrictions.

The other rights under right to freedom are protection in respect of conviction for offences (Article 20), Protection of life and personal liberty (Article 21) which states that no person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law, Article 22 provides protection against arrest and detention in certain cases.

1.4.3 RIGHT AGAINST EXPLOITATION

Article 23-24 speak about right against exploitation. Article 23 prohibits traffic in human beings and forced labour and any contravention of this is considered an offence. Article 24 prohibits employment of children below 14 years in factory, mine or in any other hazardous employment.

1.4.4 RIGHT TO FREEDOM OF RELIGION

Article 25-28 deal with right to freedom of religion, freedom of conscience and free profession, practice and propagation of religion(Article 25), freedom to manage religious affairs(Article 26), freedom for not to be compelled for payment of taxes for promotion of any particular religion(Article 27), freedom for not being compelled to attend any religious instruction or religious worship in educational institution if that institution is maintained wholly or partly under state funds, for only exception for this right being institutions established under any endowment or trust which requires that religious instruction shall be imparted in such institution even it s administrated by the State(Article 28)

1.4.5 CULTURAL AND EDUCATIONAL RIGHTS

Article 29 and 30 deal with educational and cultural rights. Minorities living in territory of India having a distinct language, script or culture should be protected to conserve the same and no citizen shall be denied admission into any educational institution maintained wholly or partly out of state funds on grounds of religion, race, caste, language or any of them(Article 29). Article 30 provides the minorities the right to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice.

1.5 DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES OF STATE POLICY

Directive principles are the directions of the Constitution to the State. While fundamental rights are enforceable by court, directive principles are not enforceable. Whenever there is a clash between fundamental rights and directive principles, it is the former that reign supreme over the latter.

Directive principles are given in the Articles 36 to 51. The directive principle state that the state should strive for the following:

1. To secure a social order for the promotion of welfare of the people (Article 38).

2. To direct its policy towards securing that the citizens have the right to an adequate means of livelihood, the ownership and the control of the material sources of the community are so distributed as to serve the common good, operation of the economic system does not result in the concentration of wealth and means of production, there is equal pay for equal work for both men and women, efforts to be initiated for the health and strength of workers, men and women. Children are given opportunities and facilities to develop in a healthy manner and in condition of freedom and dignity the child hood and the youth are protected against exploitation (Article 39).

3. To provide equal justice and free legal aid (Article 39A).
4. To organize village panchayat (Article 40).
5. To make effective provision for securing the right to work, to education and to public assistance in cases of unemployment, old age, sickness and displacement and in other cases of undeserved want (Article 41).
6. To make provision for securing just and humane conditions of work and for maternity relief (Article 42).
7. To secure, by suitable legislation or economic organization or in any other way, to all workers, agricultural, industrial or otherwise, work, a living wage, conditions of work ensuring a decent standard of life and full enjoyment of leisure and social and cultural opportunities and to promote cottage industries on an individual or co-operative basis in rural areas (Article 43).
8. By suitable legislation or in any other way, to ensure the participation of workers in the management of undertakings, establishments or other organizations engaged in any industry (Article 43 A).
9. To secure for citizens a uniform civil code throughout the territory of India (Article 44).
10. To provide, within a period of ten years from the commencement of the Constitution, for free and compulsory education for all children until they complete the age of fourteen years (Article 45).
11. To promote with special care the educational and economic interests of the weaker sections of the society, and in particular in scheduled castes and the scheduled tribes and shall protect them from social injustice and all forms of exploitation (Article 46).
12. To raise the level of nutrition and the standard of living of its people and the improvement of public health as among its primary duties and, in particular, the state shall endeavor to bring about prohibition of the consumption, except for medicinal purpose of in toxicating drinks and, of drugs which are injurious to health. (Article 47).
13. To organize agriculture and animal husbandry on modern and scientific lines and shall, in particular, take steps for preserving and improving the breeds of cows and calves and other cattle (Article 48).
14. To protect and improve the environment and to safeguard the forests and wildlife of the country (Article 48A).
15. To protect every monument or place or object of artistic or historic interest, declared by or under law made by parliament to be of national importance, from spoliation, destruction, removal or disposal or export, as the case may be (Article 49).

16. To separate the judiciary from the executive in the public services of the State(Article 50).

17. To promote international peace and security: maintain just the honorable relations between nations; foster respect for international law and encourage settlement of international disputes by arbitration (Article 51).

1.6 FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND EXPRESSION: ARTICLE 19 1(a)

Article 19(1) (a) States that "all citizen shall have the right to freedom of speech and expression". Thus all the citizens enjoy a constitutional right to exercise free expression of their views, opinions and convictions. The Press and Media has empowered for this purpose, right to seek, receive and impart information and ideas. As the exercise of freedom of expression requires a medium through which information and ideas may be communicated, it is naturally follows that the medium shall also be free. Our Constitution doesn't specifically mention the freedom of Press. However, the Supreme Court has, following the above logic, very explicitly ruled that freedom of Press is included in the guarantee of the freedom of expression, which also includes the liberty to publish and circulate. The apex court has declared that there is no need to make a separate provision for the freedom of Press.

But as the right has been guaranteed to all Indian citizens, the right of Press is no more than that of a citizen. Therefore the Press cannot claim any special privilege.

But here, this is not an absolute freedom, the limitation of this freedom are stated in Article 19(2).

1.6.1 ARTICLE 19(2)

Article 19(2) of the Constitution empowers the State to enact laws imposing reasonable restrictions on the exercise of this freedom. "In the interest of the sovereignty and integrity of India, the security of the State, friendly relations with foreign States, public order, decency and morality, or in relation to contempt of court, defamation or incitement to an offence". Thus the Constitution permits certain restrictions to be placed on the press to protect the greater interest of

- (a) the State, like the need to maintain its existence
- (b) the society, in the form of public safety and tranquility, decency and morality, public confidence, in the administration of Justice, and
- (c) The individual, in enjoying his reputation and fair name.

1.7 CONTEMPT OF COURTS

Judiciary is the most important part of the three arms of the government. It interprets laws. The Judiciary settles disputes between individuals, between the individuals and the states, and among various constituents of the State. In order to it is effective that all must have faith and confidence in its impartiality, fairness and concern for the rights of the individual, interest of the State and the good of the society. For this its independence must be ensured. There must be no interference in its functioning and no attempt to intimidate or influence it. Any such thing shall be done on the pain of punishment.

This is, broadly the objective of providing for the law of contempt of courts. According to section 2 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, contempt is of two kinds Civil Contempt and Criminal Contempt.

1.7.1 Civil Contempt means willful disobedience to any judgment, decree, direction, order, writ or other process of a court, or willful breach of an undertaking given to a court.

1.7.2 Criminal Contempt means publication of any matter or doing of any other act whatsoever, which

(i) scandalizes or tends to scandalize or tends to lower any authority of any court;
 (ii) prejudices or interferes or tends to interfere with due course of any judicial proceeding; or

(iii) interferes or tends to interfere or obstruct the administration of justice in any other manner.

Publication of any thing which tends to create in the mind of people an apprehension about the integrity, ability or fairness of the judge or which tends to have in complete reliance upon the court administration of justice, amounts to contempt.

Publication which is likely to cause embarrassment in the judge's mind to the discharge of his official duty is a contempt of court.

'Trials by Newspapers' has been considered by court as interference with the proper administration of justice in pending cases. These are few examples of what amounts to the contempt of court.

However, punishment can be awarded for interference with the due course of justice only the interference is substantial.

Similarly a person will not be guilty of contempt of court for innocent publication and distribution, during the pendency of civil or criminal proceedings, of a matter which would otherwise deem to constitute contempt.

A fair and accurate report of judicial proceedings, a fair criticism of a judicial act, and a bonafide complaint concerning the presiding officer of a subordinate court do not constitute contempt of court.

Supreme Court and High Court being the courts of record can punish anybody for their contempt. Every High Court has also the power to punish contempt of subordinate courts like their own contempt.

Punishments

A contemtor can be punished with simple imprisonment only for a term extending up to six months or with a fine up to two thousand rupees or with both.

1.8 CONTEMPT OF LEGISLATURE

In some countries, contempt of parliament is the offence of obstructing the legislature in the carrying out of its functions, or of hindering any legislator in the performance of his or her duties. The offence is known by various other names in jurisdictions in which the legislature is not called “parliament”. Actions that may constitute contempt of parliament include:

- ◆ deliberately misleading a house of the legislature, or a legislative committee;
- ◆ refusing to testify before, or to produce documents to, a house or committee; and
- ◆ Attempting to influence a member of the legislature by bribery or threats.

In some jurisdictions, a house of the legislature may declare any act to constitute contempt, and this is not subject to judicial review. In others, contempt of parliament is defined by statute; while the legislature makes the initial decision of whether to punish for contempt, the person or organization in contempt may appeal to the courts. Some jurisdictions consider contempt of parliament to be a criminal offence.

1.9 DEFAMATION

The word defamation in Odia is known as Mana hani. The modern law have regarded it as an injury to a person fame and reputation. Reputation is considered as property and any damage to it can give rise to both criminal and civil action.

There is no separate law of defamation in India. The Indian Penal Code (IPC) has four sections which define elaborately what constitutes defamation and what the defenses and the punishments are.

Defamation is of two kinds: (1) Verbal (2) Written. Verbal defamation is known as slander while written defamation is known as libel. Both offences are punishable under the same section of IPC.

Defamation

Slander is the act of making a false, negative spoken statement about someone, in which someone tells one or more persons an untruth about another that will harm the reputation of the person and defame.

Libel may be defined as a malicious publication, expressed either in printing or writing, or by any signs, diagrams, cartoons, or pictures, tending to destroy the reputation of a living person so as to expose him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule.

1.9.1 Slander

Slander is the act of making a false, negative spoken statement about someone, in which someone tells one or more persons an untruth about another that will harm the reputation of the person and defame. Slander is a civil wrong (tort) and can be the basis for a lawsuit. Words spoken over the air on television or radio are treated as slander on the theory that broadcasting reaches a large audience as much if not more than printed publications.

1.9.2 Libel

Libel may be defined as a malicious (to do harm) publication, expressed either in printing or writing, or by any signs, diagrams, cartoons, or pictures, tending to destroy the reputation of a living person so as to expose him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule. Such a libel is a civil libel, answerable in damages to the person so libeled. When a libel is published and creates to take place a riot, this type of libel is a criminal libel punishable for the protection of the public good and public safety.

Defamation gives rise to both civil and criminal action. The civil law relating to defamation is not codified in our country. Therefore civil action against defamation is based on the English Common Law, subject to statutory exceptions.

Criminal law of defamation is contained in Section 499 to 502 of the IPC and is very exhaustive. There is no civil action if defamation is of the spoken word. The press, being a written and printed medium, is likely to commit an offence of libel only. The main difference between civil suit and criminal proceeding for defamation is pertaining to the compensation. The object of civil action is to adequately compensate the person defamed for the loss of reputation by damages; the objective of criminal prosecution is to punish the offender, by imprisonment or fine or both.

In criminal law intention is essential for liability. Good faith is a defense in criminal law. But truth as such is no defense in criminal proceedings except under the first exception to Sec. 499 of IPC. It is necessary to prove further that the defamatory publication is for the public good.

2.1 Learning Objectives

In the previous unit we have discussed about Indian constitution and various rights given to the citizen and journalists in the constitution. We have also discussed about directive principles of state policy and some laws like contempt of court, contempt of legislature and defamation. In this unit we shall discuss about the provisions mentioned in the Indian penal code. Various sections of Indian penal code and also some important acts like official secret act, right to information act, press and book registration act, intellectual property rights act and copy right act. After going through this unit, you will be able to understand:

1. Sedition and inflammatory writings
 2. Various sections and provisions of Indian penal code
 3. Code of criminal procedures mentioned in IPC
 4. Acts like official secret act, right to information act, press and book registration act, intellectual property rights act and copy right act

2.2 Introduction

Our constitution has given us many rights and freedoms to enjoy. The same is applicable for a journalist also. What a journalist writes in a newspaper or telecasts in a news channel; people believe in it. Therefore wrong or malicious publications and writings are harmful for not only the concerned but also for the society. Therefore several regulations and laws are there to avoid such things. In fact if there is any wrong and mischief information gets published, there are provision in the Indian penal code for punishment. We shall discuss all those sections and codes of IPC in this unit. We shall also discuss the acts official secrets act and rights to information.

2.3 SEDITION AND INFLAMMATORY WRITINGS

2.3.1 SEDITION

According to Section 124A of the Indian Penal Code: whoever, by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards the Government establishment by law in India, shall be punished with imprisonment for life, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation 1: The expression “disaffection” includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2: Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without existing or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3: Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without existing or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

2.3.2 INFLAMMATORY WRITING

Inflammatory writing is a form of speech that is used with the intent to stir up emotions, elicit anger, or invoke a physical reaction. Name calling is one form, but the use is generally wider in scope, in the sense that it is used to attack, oppress, or denigrate groups of people, or focus hate or anger on a public figure.

Websites that post “wanted” posters, using the names and photographs of doctors who perform abortions, can be an example. Many of Hitler’s most famous speeches, combining national patriotic feelings with anti-Jewish sentiment, and stirring the listeners to “act now” were also examples of inflammatory language.

2.4 INDIAN PENAL CODE

2.4.1 INTRODUCTION

Indian Penal Code covers almost all the crime happening in the society. It is a piece of British colonial legislation dating from 1860. Now it provides a penal code for the entire country including Jammu and Kashmir, where it was renamed the Ranbir Penal Code (RPC). The code could be applied to any offence committed by an Indian citizen. The draft of the Indian Penal Code was prepared by the First Law Commission, chaired by Lord Macaulay. The draft, after it underwent a very careful revision, was passed into law in 1860. Indian Penal Code came into force and is regularly amended.

The Code has a total of 511 Sections covering various aspects of the criminal law. The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 deals with many offences. Bailable (the accused has the right to get bail) and non-bailable (the decision to grant bail or not is the decision of the court), cognizable (the police officer can arrest an offender without a warrant) and non-cognizable (a police officer cannot arrest without warrant) offences, compoundable (can be compromised by the parties to the dispute) and non-compoundable (those which cannot be compromised by any means) offences. In both Indian Penal Code and Criminal Procedure Code, certain provision specifically deal with media. This chapter provides an account of those portions which are relevant to media.

- (2) In every such case the court shall follow, as nearly as may be practicable, the procedure prescribed for summary trials.

2.6 OFFICIAL SECRET ACT, 1923

The Official Secret Act, 1923 is a comprehensive document relating to official secrets and defines a number of offences. The Act is aimed at maintaining the security of the state against leakage of secret information, sabotage and the like. However, many of the acts prohibited by this law may be committed by newspaper and journalists, as private individuals, while performing their duties.

The Official Secrets Act, 1923 broadly has two parts:

One relating to spying for the enemy (Secs.3&4). The punishment for spying in relation to the country defense is up to fourteen years.

Second one relates to unauthorized communication of any other secret official code or passwords, or any sketch, plan model, article, note, document or information (Sec.5). Laws against printing of classified documents are understandable in relation to certain areas like defense and security of the country. But the Official Secrets Act also prohibits publication or communication of any information, which may be directly and indirectly useful to the enemy.

In India, it has been widely demanded that Section 5 of the Official Secrets Act which inhibits free reporting should be done away with. It prescribes a punishment with imprisonment up to five years or fine or both for a person who voluntarily receives or communicates any official secret. This means that any official information which has been deemed by the authorities as secret can be published only on the pain of punishment.

2.7 RIGHT TO INFORMATION ACT, 2005

The Right to Information Act (RTI) is an act of the Parliament of India “to provide for setting out the practical regime of right to information for citizens” and replaces the erstwhile Freedom of information Act, 2002. Under the provisions of the Act, any citizen may request information from a “public authority” (a body of government or “instrumentality of state”) which is required to reply expeditiously or within thirty days. The Act also requires every public authority to computerize their records for wide dissemination and to proactively contain categories of information so that the citizens need minimum recourse to request for information formally. This law was passed by Parliament on 15 June 2005 and came into force on 12 October 2005. The first application was given to a Pune police station. Information disclosure in India was restricted by the Official Secrets Act 1923 and various other special laws, which the new RTI Act relaxes. It codifies a fundamental right of citizens.

PROCESS

The RTI process involves reactive (as opposed to proactive) disclosure of information by the authorities. An RTI request initiates the process.

Each authority covered by the RTI Act must appoint their Public Information Officer (PIO). Any person may submit a written request to the PIO for information. It is the PIO’s obligation to provide information to citizens of India who request information under the Act. If the request pertains to another public authority (in whole or part), it is the PIO’s responsibility to transfer/forward the concerned portions of the request to a PIO of the other authority within 5 working days. In addition, every public authority is required to designate Assistant Public Information Officers (APIOs) to receive RTI requests and appeals for forwarding to the PIOs of their public authority. The applicant is required to disclose his name and contact particulars but not any other reasons or justification for seeking information.

The Central Information Commission (CIC) acts upon complaints from those individuals who have not been able to submit information requests to a Central Public Information Officer or State Public Information Officer due to either the officer not having been appointed, or because the respective Central Assistant Public Information Officer or State Assistant Public Information Officer refused to receive the application for information.

The Act specifies time limits for replying to the request:

- ◆ If the request has been made to the PIO, the reply is to be given within 30 days of receipt.
- ◆ If the request has been made to an APIO, the reply is to be given within 35 days of receipt.
- ◆ If the PIO transfers the request to another public authority (better concerned with the information requested), the time allowed to reply is 30 days but computed from the day after it is received by the PIO of the transferee authority.
- ◆ Information concerning corruption and human rights violations by scheduled security agencies (those listed in the Second Schedule to the Act) is to be provided within 45 days but with the prior approval of the Central Information Commission.
- ◆ However, if life or liberty of any person is involved, the PIO is expected to reply within 48 hours.

Since the information is to be paid for, the reply of the PIO is necessarily limited to either denying the request (in whole or part) and/or providing a computation of “further fees”. The time between the reply of the PIO and the time taken to deposit the further fees for information is excluded from the time allowed. If information is not provided within this period, it is treated as deemed refusal. Refusal with or without reasons may be ground for appeal or complaint. Further, information not provided in the time prescribed is to be provided free of charge. Appeal processes are also defined.

2.8 PRESS AND BOOKS REGISTRATION ACT, 1867

The oldest surviving Act in this regard is the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867. It also remained the fundamental law governing the rules for the regulation of the publication of newspaper and of having of printing press.

Though, every printing press and a newspaper need no license or permission to publish books or newspaper under this Act, a declaration is mandatory to be made in the prescribed manner before the District, Presidency or Sub-divisional Magistrate and authenticated by him is necessary before the newspaper is published. Similarly, no printing press can be set up without making a relevant declaration. The act requires the name of the printer, the place of the printing and name of the publisher and the place of the publication must be legibly printed on every book or newspaper printed/published in India.

For having a press to print books or newspapers, a declaration must be made before the District Presidency or Sub-divisional Magistrate giving description of its location. Every time a press is shifted to a new place a fresh declaration is necessary to be submitted.

Two conditions are necessary to be fulfilled for publishing a newspaper. One, the name of the editor must be clearly printed on every copy of the newspaper. Two, the declaration must be made before the District, Presidency or Sub-divisional Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the newspaper is to be published, stating the following facts: (a) name of the printer and the publisher (b) premises where printing and publishing is conducted, (c) the title, language and periodicity of the newspaper. Publication can be started only after the said Magistrate authenticates the declaration.

No person who does not ordinarily reside in India or a minor can file a declaration or edit a newspaper. If the declaration is made in accordance with the provision of the law and if no other paper bearing the same or similar title is already in existence in the same language or the same state, then the Magistrate cannot refuse to authenticate the declaration. However before authentication he must make an enquiry from the Registrar of Newspaper in India (RNI) about the existence of such other paper.

After authentication the paper must be started within a specific period. The declaration in respect of the publication if not published within a specified period it shall be void. A daily, a weekly or a bi-weekly newspaper must commence publication within six weeks and a fortnightly, monthly or a quarterly can start publishing within three months after authentication.

The Magistrate can cancel the declaration and order closure of a newspaper for irregular publication. In a period of three months if any newspaper publishes less than half the number of issues which it should have to publish in accordance with the declaration, the newspaper shall cease to publish. A fresh declaration must be filed before it can be started again.

Two copies of each issue of a newspaper and up to three copies of each book must be delivered, in a prescribed manner to the government free of expense.

The declaration can be cancelled by the Magistrate after giving opportunity to show cause to the person concerned, if the Magistrate is satisfied on the following counts:

- (a) The newspaper is being published in contravention of the provision of this Act or rules made under it,
- (b) The newspaper bears a title which is the same as, or similar to that of any other newspaper published either in the same language or in the same state
- (c) The printer or publisher has ceased to be so,

- (d) The declaration was made on false representation on concealment of any material fact.

Penalties: if a newspaper (or a book) is printed or published without legibly printing the name of the printer and publisher and also the name of the place of printing/publishing, the printer or publisher can be fined up to two thousand rupees or imprisonment up to six months or punished by both.

Registrar of Newspaper: there is a provision for appointment of a Press Registrar by the Government of India. The Press Registrar maintains a register containing the following particulars of each newspaper: title, language, periodicity, name of the editor, printer and publisher; place of printing and publication; average no of pages per week, number of days of publication in the year, average number of copies printed, sold and distributed free; retail selling price per copy, and names and addresses of owners.

2.9 INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS

The property born out of a person's intellect is termed Intellectual Property (IP). As a person's physical property should be safeguarded, the intellectual byproduct too need protection from infringement. The legal rights thrust on a person to safeguard his/her intellectual property are termed Intellectual Property Rights (IPRs). Such rights are the protections granted to the creators of IP, and include trademarks, copyright, patents, industrial design and in some jurisdictions trade secrets. Artistic works including music and literature and designs etc. can all be protected as intellectual property. By those legal rights, you can prevent others from making use of your knowledge so that you can cash on in it.

2.9.1 WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION

The World Trade Organization (WTO) substantiated the rules of intellectual property law and brought them within the scope of trade related Intellectual property rights which are to be enforceable within the country which has granted those rights.

There are various types of intellectual property rights. They are as follows:

1. Patents: New inventions employing scientific and technical knowledge, value addition to existing technology. It is a contract between inventor and government. e.g., a new drug.
2. Trade mark and service mark: Visual symbol in the form of a word, service or level applied to an article of a manufacturer, e.g., Yahoo, Zee, Honda etc.
3. Industrial Designs: Idea or a conception as to the features of the shape, configuration pattern, ornament of composition of lines or colours applied to any article. Design is for beautifying an industrial product to attract consumer public. Any new or original design adopted for ornamentation, shaping and configuration of an industrial product is eligible for design registration.

4. Copyright: Right to copy and making use of literary, dramatic, musical, artistic works, cinematographic films records and broadcasts.
5. Geographical indications: Geographical indications identify goods as originating in the territory of a country, an origin or a locality in that territory, where a specific quality, reputation or other characteristics of the goods is essentially attributed to their geographical origin, e.g., Darjeeling Tea, Kanchipuram saree etc.
6. Protection for new plant varieties: Trade Related aspects of Intellectual Property Rights(TRIPs) provision of the World Trade Organization an agreement make it mandatory for member countries to provide protection for new plant varieties, e.g., new variety of rice, wheat etc. as per the provisions, the member countries can give protection to new plant varieties in two ways:
 - (i) Under the patent law
 - (ii) By a separate system called (Sugeneries System)

2.10 COPYRIGHT ACT, 1957

The purpose of this Act, “copyright” means the exclusive right subject to the provisions of this Act, to do or authorize the doing of any of the following act in respect of a work or any substantial part thereof, namely; a work of literature, drama, music or art is an intellectual property. It must be protected from illegal copying or reproducing it. The Copyright Act, 1957 accords this protection.

This law is based on two competing considerations. One, the creators property, that is the original works need to be protected. Two, for the advancement of knowledge in the interest of the society, there should be some amount of freedom to produce parts of other people’s copyrighted works. Copyright has been held to be a right which a person acquires in a work which is the result of his intellectual labour. The primary function of the copyright law is to protect from annexation by other people the fruits of a humans work, labour or skill. In respect of the press, copyright means, under section of the copyright act, 1957, the exclusive right in the case of a literary, dramatic or musical work, to do and authorize the doing in substantive form of the following acts, namely:

- i) To reproduce the work on material form;
- ii) To publish the work;
- iii) To make any adoption of a work; and
- iv) To reproduce or publish translation of the work.
- v) To include the work in any cinematograph film;
- vi) To make a copy of the film, including a photograph of any image forming part thereof;

vii) To make any sound recording embodying it;

viii) To sell or give on hire, or offer for sale or hire, any copy of the film or sound recording,

Punishment for knowingly infringement or abetting the infringement of a copy right is imprisonment which may exceed up to one year or fine or both.

3.1 LEARNING OBJECTIVES

In the previous unit we discussed about various Indian penal code and different acts related to media. In this unit we shall discuss about different broadcasting laws and codes. After going through this unit we will be able to understand:

1. Broadcasting laws
2. Different acts related to broadcasting like Prasar Bharti Act, cable television network regulation act, proposed broadcasting regulatory authority of India act.
3. Offences and penalties related to broadcasting etc.

3.2 INTRODUCTION

Broadcasting in India started on 31st July, 1924, when the Madras Presidency Radio Club went on the air for the first time. However, their pioneering, effort came to an end in 1927 owing to financial crisis. The move towards a regular broadcasting service was made in the same year by the Indian Broadcasting Company, a commercial undertaking, which chose for its operations the two premier cities of Bombay and Calcutta. In March, 1930 the Indian Broadcasting Company had to go into liquidation. A month later, the then Government of India took over the control of the Company's affairs and the Indian State Broadcasting Service was born; but the worst was not over. After operating the service for about 18 months, the Government decided to close it down having concluded that the service was hardly a viable proposition. At this juncture, public opinion began to assert itself and the Government gave up the contemplated closure. And thus, in May, 1932, Indian Broadcasting received its permanent lease of life. The next four years were marked by some significant developments and, in June, 1936, Indian State Broadcasting was given its present name, All India Radio. After that many laws and acts came into place for broadcasting which we shall discuss here.

3.3 BROADCASTING LAWS

Broadcasting is the dissemination of information through audio and video. Broadcasting-comprising both radio and television- constitutes a very large part of the mass media. In India radio broadcasting through All India Radio started in the year 1936 and the television broadcasting through Doordarshan was introduced in the year 1959. The first serious effort to legislate a comprehensive broadcast law was the Draft Akash Bharti Bill, 1978, proposed by the working group on Autonomy for Akashvani and Doordarshan, constituted under the chairmanship of Mr. B. G. Verghese. The Draft Bill, intended to be an aid to legislation, provided for a simple statute established the National Broadcasting Trust, and set out its objectives, scope, powers and basic structure. It was at the point of time, hoped that the Akash Bharti Act established the National Broadcasting Trust would come into force from January 1979 and Akashvani and Doordarshan would cease to be the attached offices of the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting. What happened to this initial effort is now a part of history, the Janata Party government, which introduced the bill, with diluted provisions for autonomy, was voted out of office before the legislature could be enacted.

3.4 PRASAR BHARTI ACT, 1990

The Parliament in the year 1990, enacted the Prasar Bharti (Broadcasting Corporation of India) Act. The Act provided for establishment of a Broadcasting Corporation of India. The unique feature of the Act was that it enlarged the definition of broadcasting. According to section 2(c), "Broadcasting means the dissemination of any form of communication like signs, signals, writing, pictures, images and sound of all kind by transmission of electromagnetic waves through cables intended to be received by the general public either directly or indirectly through the medium of relay station and all its grammatical variations and cognate expression shall be constructed accordingly.” It is more comprehensive because it takes care of the transmission of electromagnetic waves through space or through cables.

Section 22: Power to make rules

1. The central government may, by notification in the official gazette, make rules to carry out the provisions of this Act.

3.6: DIGITIZATION AND CONDITIONAL ACCESS SYSTEM(CAS)

CAS or conditional access system is a digital mode of transmitting TV channels through a set-top box (STB). The transmission signals are encrypted and viewers need to buy a set-top box to receive and decrypt the signal. The STB is required to watch only pay channels.

The idea of CAS was mooted in 2001, due to a furor over charge hikes by channels and subsequently by cable operators. Poor reception of certain channels; arbitrary pricing and increase in prices; bundling of channels; poor service delivery by cable television operators; monopolies in each area; lack of regulatory framework and redress avenues were some of the issues that were to be addressed by implementation of CAS

It was decided by the government that CAS would be first introduced in the four metros. It has been in place in Chennai since September 2003, where until very recently it had managed to attract very few subscribers. It has been rolled out recently in the other three metros of Delhi, Mumbai and Kolkata.

4.1 LEARNING OBJECTIVES

In the previous unit we discussed about different broadcasting laws and acts like Prasar Bharti Act and Cable TV Network Regulation Act. In this unit we shall focus on Journalism as a profession. We shall also put lights on the very important working journalist act. After going through this unit we will get to know:

1. Journalism as a profession
2. Whether it is an organized or unorganized profession
3. The Working Journalists Act etc.

4.2 INTRODUCTION

As we have been discussing, a journalist never enjoys any special luxury or rights according to our constitution. But the responsibility of a journalist is very high towards the society. A journalist works 24 hours and collects information for the people. But in response he gets very little wage for his work. Journalists get lowest salary in the entire world. In India their salary is even lower and in Odisha they get the minimum amount. For this, there is an act in India called Working Journalist Act, 1955 in which there is mention about no. of working hours, Procedure for fixing and revising rates of wages, constitution of tribunal for fixing or revised rates of wages in respect of working journalists etc. We shall discuss all these in this unit. We shall also put focus on the profession of journalism, whether it's an organized or an unorganized profession.

4.3 JOURNALISM AS AN ORGANIZED/ UNORGANIZED SECTOR

The Indian print media has achieved remarkable growth in numbers and circulation. The industry is undergoing a technological revolution which has made possible to produce attractive newspapers and periodicals. Colour has appeared in their advertisements and photographs. Now mostly every dailies are computerized both in editorial and printing departments.

The advent of satellite television channels has posed a serious problem for survival to the print media and the debate is now going on who will win in the end.

The advent of Internet revolution has changed the whole world with its speed and today each and everyone can create a viral in social media.

But always there is a question, that weather journalism in India is an organized sector or unorganized sector.
